In class you have had a discussion about inequality and work. You have made the notes below:

Do the privileged few get a head start in life?

- Stability in the home
- Work contacts and opportunities
- Time to hone one's skills

Write an essay discussing two of the points given and explain the reasons behind your answer.

Recently, you have held a discussion in a university plenary about work-life balance. You have made the notes below:

Work is the pillar of society though it is obvious that people need to disconnect. Where is the balance?

- Fulfilling one's potential
- Supporting family members
- Using one's time productively

Write an essay using two of the points and say what might be the most effective way of achieving a healthy work-life balance.

You have discussed young people and their future work prospects in class. You have made the notes below:

What might be the most effective strategy to prepare young people for work?

- Work placements
- Workshops in schools
- Establishing links with local businesses

Write an essay discussing two of the points and say which should be implemented into the national curriculum.

You have watched a YouTube documentary in class about what young people can learn from past generations. Here are some notes from the video:

In which ways can young people learn from past generations?

- Family stability
- Work ethic
- Managing money

Write an essay using two of the points and state which can be the most influential life lessons.

You have seen a documentary about the influence of culture on different societies. Find the notes from the documentary here:

How important is one's culture in building a sense of identity?

- Attitude towards education
- Attitude towards their job
- Relationship with friends and family

Write an essay choosing two of the points and state, which is most affected by a person's cultura background.
